Not planning at all for the future is the biggest mistake a family can make, especially when it can impact a loved one with special needs. But there are also some common mistakes that can be avoided.

We'll review some common planning situations with the understanding that the actual plan created for an individual with special needs will be unique to their needs and lifestyle.

Avoiding these common situations can provide a significant impact on the life of a loved one with special needs today and well into their future.
